Re: Colorado Rising

Dear Secretary Williams:

I am writing on my behalf of my client, Colorado Rising, and its Registered Agent, Tricia Olson, regarding an error in a major contributor report, as amended (October 23, 29 and 30, 2018), and a regular report of October 29, 2018, as amended October 30, 2018. Due to a mistake, Ms. Olson erroneously reported a family foundation, the Sergey Brin Family Foundation ("Foundation"), as the source of a contribution for $170,000 on October 23, 2018. In fact, the source of the contribution, (an in-kind contribution for digital media content in the corrected amount of $153,000), was not the Foundation, but was instead a 501(c)(3) entity, ProgressNow Education Fund.

In order to prevent any adverse impacts to the Foundation due to Colorado Rising's reporting mistake, please allow this letter to serve as a request to add the following description to the Description field on all three Major Contributor Reports (October 23, October 29, and October 30) and to Colorado Rising's regular October 29, 2018 report and the amendment to the same filed October 30, 2018:

"Contributor reported in error. See communication dated October 30, 2018."

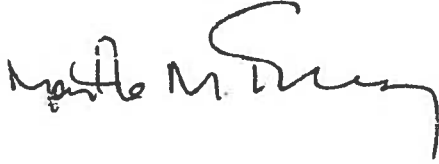

This letter can serve as the explanation for the mistaken reporting of the Foundation. Please let me know if you have any questions or would like to discuss this further.

Thank you for your assistance with this matter.

It's Sergey Brin vs. John Elway in Colorado's Oil-Drilling Clash

Michael Bellusci

Published: Oct 29 2018, 4:30 PM Last Updated: Nov 01 2018, 5:04 PM

(Bloomberg) -- A ballot measure that could curb oil and gas development in Colorado has attracted attention from some heavyweight names, including former Denver Broncos quarterback John Elway.

Proposition 112 would require new drilling sites, processing plants and gathering lines to be located at least 2,500 feet away from homes, schools and other "vulnerable" areas. That could lead to about 54 percent of state land becoming inaccessible to producers for new oil and gas development, according to the Colorado Oil & Gas Conservation Commission.

READ MORE: Colorado's $40 Million Battle Over Drilling in Three Charts

"Polling continues to move in the industry's direction, with generally 'yes' in the low 40s and 'no' in the high 40s. Some recent polls seem to be even better, presumably due to the 'Elway bump'" according to SunTrust analyst Welles Fitzpatrick, as the Denver Broncos' two-time Super Bowl champion quarterback and current president of football operations/general manager John Elway appeared in ads recommending people vote no.

Colorado House Majority Leader KC Becker, a Democrat representing a north-central district that includes part of Boulder County, recently said proponents simply don't have the funding necessary to go up against the oil and gas industry, which has pumped more than $30 million into a campaign to defeat the measure. Proponents, meanwhile, have raised $700,000.

Ex I

Backers of proposition 112 raised about $351,000 for the period of October 11-24, based on an amended filing as of October 30, of which only $177,000 was in cash, according to TRACER data.

Alphabet Inc. founder Sergey Brin's foundation was briefly listed earlier this week among donors backing the plan -- with an "in kind" gift for digital media, although the filing was later corrected. Brin's foundation, instead, donated the service to general operations for ProgressNow Colorado, a communication firm that supports local progressive causes.

"There was a huge misunderstanding on the part of Colorado Rising that led to an erroneous campaign finance filing with the Secretary of State's office," ProgressNow Colorado's executive director Ian Silverii told Bloomberg news.

Still, Credit Suisse sees the result as likely to be a close call.

"While Election Day's outcome is ultimately binary, even #112's defeat could support perception of continued regulatory overhang," the bank's analysts led by Betty Jiang told clients in a note.

"Early results still show both major parties participating similarly, with Republican ballot submissions ahead by over 2,400 ballots and the gap narrowing from Friday. If the polls closed as of this writing, Proposition 112 would fail but by a razor thin margin." Robert W. Baird & Co. analysts said in a note to clients on Monday.
